Hailey Kinsel and DM Sissy Hayday "Sister" flew through the cloverleaf pattern at the Thomas and Mack winning or sharing the win in five out of 10 rounds en route to their fourth world title. In doing so, they also surpassed the $1 million mark in NFR earnings alone. WPROA photo by Hailey Rae

GOLDEN AGAIN

Kinsel Tops The Barrel Racing Field for Fourth Time in Six Years

By Ted Harbin

If Hailey Kinsel were as golden as her four buckles, then Sister is the diamond that makes everything shine.

Kinsel earned her fourth WPROA world championship when she and DM Sissy Hayday put on a Las Vegas spectacular during the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo. They won five go-rounds – that includes sharing the fifth go with Lisa Lockhart – and placed on two other nights to earn $182,783 during a 10-day gem of ProRodeo's grand finale.

In her six trips to the Wrangler NFR, Kinsel has finished no worse than second and has won a total of $1,109,429 at the NFR alone in her career, a true indication of the champion she is and the champion she's ridden at each one. Even though she had two tipped barrels, Kinsel still found a place in the average (eighth). When she and Sister left the Nevada desert, they were No. 1 in the world standings with $302,172 and outdistanced reigning world champ Jordon Briggs by less than a go-round victory.

"It's all still setting in, trying to make sense in my head that we got it done," said Kinsel of Cotulla, Texas. "I think I was so tired after that it was relieving, not only to have pulled it off but for it all to be over. Maybe once I get my energy back, I'll really be able to reflect on it and let it set in."

It takes a lot to manage the two weeks in Las Vegas. There are appearances and meetings and practices. Sister still needs attention, even though she has been through this experience six times, and Kinsel had to find time to take care of herself. She battled through the Vegas crud, downed barrels and making sure she met all requirements made of her time, and she still came out a winner.

“It’s special,” she said. “It was a hard-fought victory. It was an incredible barrel race. Last year was like that, but it was between two of us; this year there were four of us down to the wire. I was thrilled to be in the mix of that sort of race.”

It was a race to the finish line, too. Briggs was coming down the stretch, as was Lisa Lockhart, who was competing at the Wrangler NFR for a 16th consecutive time. Wenda Johnson made a run for the gold, and Shelley Morgan’s consistency shined in her average title. With Kinsel, they made up the top five in the final world standings, and despite penalties on three nights, Emily Beisel finished sixth on the money list thanks to a strong NFR that saw her collect nearly $130,000 in go-round money alone.

“I feel like they all feel super unique in their own ways,” Kinsel said of her four Montana Silversmiths gold buckles. “This one definitely felt a little harder. I didn’t come to the NFR in the top two in the world, but it wasn’t like I had to have one of the best NFRs I’ve ever had.

“I also came in a little less laser-focused on the world championship. It allowed me to be a little more free. I think that comes from maturity, and it comes from loss from previous years. I think what changed in me was maturing and realizing that so much of this is out of our control. The only reason we get to do this is because of our horses.”

That also included the daily grind that led to the hectic 10 December nights. By focusing her attention on the things within her control, Kinsel found a great deal of joy in the experience. Of course, running one of the greatest barrel racing horses of all time certainly helps.

“I was going to find the good things in all of it, and I think that has really helped my perspective the last couple of years, even the last couple of days,” she said. “I was going to be happy with myself and my horse regardless of the results, and I think that helped a ton.”

Sister is an 11-year-old palomino mare out of Royal Sissy Irish by PC Frenchmans Hayday, and she’s been a rock star since the day Kinsel put her on tour. They’ve won all over the place and, in 2020, set the world record on a standard pattern with a 16.63-second run at Dodge City, Kansas. Four months later, they broke that record with a 16.56 at the Wrangler NFR in Arlington, Texas, during the championship’s COVID-related one-year hiatus from Las Vegas.

Sister also owns the four fastest times ever recorded inside the Thomas & Mack Center,

Hailey Kinsel and Sister didn't safety up any in the 10th round of the NFR winning the round in a time of 13.35 seconds, the second fastest time of the 2022 Wrangler National Finals Rodeo. The duo entered their sixth NFR ranked 5th but after winning $182,783, they walked away with the world title. WPRR photo by Kenneth Springer with the record being 13.11 seconds in 2017. She and Kinsel have also stopped the clock in 13.13, 13.34 and 13.35 – the last two times came during the last two go-rounds of this year’s finale.

“Sis felt great, and she got weirdly stronger in the last couple of days,” she said. “By the seventh or eighth round, she started running harder. She always tries, but it was like we had a second wind hit us at the end. She’s amazing to be able to get better. She never acts like she gets sick of it, and I would never blame her if she does.

“There is nothing like 10 times in a row, one horse, one building. She was particularly amazing how strong she was at the end. Getting some age on her doesn't seem to be a problem for her. When we came out of the alley in the 10th round, she was like a shot out of a cannon. When she was 6 and ran the 13.11, I remember wise people who were trying to be helpful telling me, 'You have to make more practice runs.' Well, she's 11, and we went from Albuquerque (New Mexico) in September to December without making a run, and she did pretty well."

With age comes maturity, for Kinsel and her prized yellow steed.

"Here it is five years later, and she makes the next fastest two runs," she said. "It's really cool to have the four fastest runs at the NFR, but it's cooler that she was able to do them four years apart."

It wasn't long ago that the 14.00-second run was commonly earning first-place go-round checks in Las Vegas. In 2022, there was only one time above 13.90 to sniff a paycheck, and that was for sixth place on opening night.

While Sister shined in Las Vegas, she wasn't the only reason why Kinsel returned to the Wrangler NFR for the sixth straight year. The Texas cowgirl leaned on some younger horses through the meat of the summer. Sister suffered a bruised foot the first week of June, and Kinsel had already entered through the Fourth of July run at arenas she knew the yellow speedster would like.

"She was actually pretty sound pretty quickly, but I didn't feel like hauling her was the best thing to do," the jockey said. "I wanted to get her back in firing shape. I had three mares that deserved a chance to go. I didn't go to Reno (Nevada), but I went to most of the rodeos I entered.

"They got the finals made for me in the first month of the summer without her. They got us over the edge. I went ahead and entered the rodeos in the Northwest. I had a fresh horse, so we made a run at it. It was definitely a different season that wasn't entirely planned, but we just rolled with the punches. We just tried to make the best decision for the horse, and all three of the colts exceeded my expectations."

It's always about the horses for the barrel racers who compete at a high level. They know

Not only did Hailey Kinsel and Sister win the world title but they also turned in the fastest time of the 2022 Wrangler NFR in the ninth round when they stopped the clock in 13.34 seconds, besting the time set in the eighth round by first time qualifier Leslie Smalgyo in a time of 13.41 seconds. WPRA photo by Kenneth Springer there's no shot at the kind of money they can earn without elite runners. For someone like Kinsel, who owns the richest hardware ever made in rodeo and now has a collection of them, there is a value to her skills on the backs of these beautiful beasts built for speed. How does she remain humble?

"That's God," she said. "That's my faith and my family, who instilled that in me."

It's also rodeo, which can turn that roller coaster ride upside down in a hurry. Of course, she has the comfort of knowing Sister is right there to make the ride with her and has for so long. She started her 2017 season just hoping to run with the big dogs a little bit, then came her intercollegiate national title while competing at Texas A&M. Her first NFR was a grand success, and so have the next five.

"I just wanted to get into the winter rodeos and give myself a shot at the future," Kinsel said. "I intended to come home after that first summer and get a job.

"It was not the plan for us. We were just going to see how it went and whatever that was going to look like. It's opened a lot of doors to do what I do. That's what I'm doing, and that's because of Sis. More than anything, it's what she's continued to do. She's continued to make this my life, and I'm grateful for that."

Hailey Kinsel has a heart of gold, a gem of a horse and in just six years, she's changed the face of barrel racing.

Between 1976 and 1978, the method of choosing the World Champion Barrel Racer was changed to coincide with the method used by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. The 15 barrel racers with the top earnings during the regular season qualified for the National Finals Rodeo, then held in Oklahoma City. The barrel racer who won the most money at the NFR alone was named the world champion. During the years this system was in use, the NFR champion was always different from the high money winner for the year.

Before 1976 and since 1979, the world champion has been determined by total season earnings, including both regular-season and NFR earnings.
